

Social Engagement Accelerator

Athziri Vega, Carter Ward, Jeremy Martel, Logan Foster

What does it do

- The program would allow schools to collect student information about activities they want to take part in, as well likes and interests and help coordinate events and groups.
- For the students it would help them meet other people who share interests with them, as many college students are in a new place with new people and can have trouble making friends and building a new community.
- Schools can use this info to make clubs and plan off campus activities for the student that the students would have an interest in.

Target Segment

- Large residential universities where a high percentage of students come from out-of-state, first year, and transfer students.
- Along with commuters who are on campus for a certain amount of time.
- Schools with existing programs that could use the information to improve them with activities the students want.
- Customers within these Higher Education Institutions would include Student Affairs, Residence Life, Orientation Programs, and Student Success Offices.

Evidence

- GSU: "Each pillar aligns with specific programs, activities and services available to all students. Attend events, explore each pillar and remember our teams are here to support you every step of the way!" (<https://engagement.gsu.edu/the-panther-experience/>)
- Higher Ed Dive: "One of the keys to a strong campus community is fostering connections between different groups of students. Whether it's connecting current students with alumni, or bridging the gap between freshmen and seniors, inter-cohort connections can improve the overall student experience." (<https://www.highereddive.com/spons/building-a-strong-campus-community-strategies-for-engagement-and-belonging/751566/>)
- Interview 5: "So that's great, but that's only great if you know what it is that they need and want and what it is that they're missing." "So we just released a new product called live workshops where it's like, it's three weeks instead of 12. And there are more people in the class. And it's basically like a long, three long seminars with a specific instructor geared towards a specific purpose"